Oregon's Dungeness crab season is coming up, but there's a problem looming over this fishery. The ropes on crab pots can injure or even kill whales swimming into them.

New Crab Pot Could Help Reduce Whale Entanglements

The main species affected were humpback whales. Dungeness crab fishing gear, which has lines that run from buoys on the surface down to crab traps as deep as the sea floor, was the main culprit. The number of reported whale entanglements dropped to 31 in 2017, likely because water temperatures went back down.
